The graph presents employment trends in the sports sector across selected EU countries from 2011 to 2014.

In general, the employment figures across these nations depict diverse patterns during the specified period.

The Czech Republic exhibited a declining trend initially but then showed a slight upward trajectory in sports employment. Denmark also experienced a fall initially, yet the employment figures gradually increased over time.

Bulgaria demonstrated consistent growth in sports employment throughout the period, showcasing a steady rise without significant fluctuations. On the contrary, Belgium's employment remained relatively stable initially but then witnessed a decline as time progressed.

Overall, while the Czech Republic and Denmark recovered from initial drops to show slight increases, Bulgaria consistently experienced growth. In contrast, Belgium, after maintaining a stable employment rate, encountered a decline in sports-related employment toward the latter years of the period examined.
